

The do not call list is imperative to the protection of those who are vulnerable to the telemarketing predators. Many elderly and home bound have lost life savings to these bottom feeders. My husband and I work very hard, and I feel it is a total violation of privacy to be hounded by strangers, using a service I pay for. If the telemarketer is willing to pay for my phone usage, then and only then should they be allowed to call my home. Also, I have limited time at home due to my busy travel schedule for work, and I do not need to have callers bastardizing my evenings and weekends with unsolicited calls and rude attitudes for refusal of said services. This practice should be outlawed except for business to business services. Private homes should be exempt from these solicitors.

Thank you.
